

That government can always succeed where the total cumulative record of its individual citizens has been the favorite of economic planners ever since stocks were invented.

Plato had a mythical republic, Marx had a magnificient republic, and the redoubtable Englishman Samuel Butler wrote a book, "The Way of All Flesh."

Nevertheless, humanity usually winds up by finding what is written in books is never quite adequate to cover the facts of nature or the whimsies of men.

And the grand dream of a working socialist state suddenly becomes unreal.

Thus, we read this week-end that the British socialist state is finding fault with its universal free health service. The Select Committee on Estimates, which is parliament's budgetary watchdog, says compulsory medical service is costing the British far too much.

The Public Affairs institute, which describes itself as a non-profit, non-partisan research organization, predicted that 8,000,000 workers will be out of jobs a year from now unless the federal government takes steps to give business a boost.

Unemployment may hit 6,000,000 by the end of this year, the institute added.

In a special report on employment, the institute recommended tax cuts for the low and middle income brackets; emergency public works in hard-hit areas; revival of the civilian conservation corps; and other federal actions to reassure and stimulate business.

"Unemployment has passed the 'spot stage,'" the institute said. "It is not a local, but a national, problem."

The AFL looked over the economic outlook in its magazine, "Labor's Monthly Survey," and found the prospect good. It acknowledged there are some dangers, however, and said policies of unions, management and the government right now are "all important."

It said wages should keep moving upward to increase consumer buying, but suggested increases be based on increases in productivity. It urged unions to cooperate with management in cutting out waste and bringing down expenses.

The AFL warned this is no time for government, management or unions to start any tinkering that might bring on inflation again.

Senator O'Mahoney announced that the senate-house economic committee, of which he is chairman, will study employment and investments.

"While unemployment has increased slightly during the first part of this year," he said, "at the same time the latest figures show that total civilian employment in May of this year was 50,694,000—a larger number than in any previous month in 1949, and larger than the employment figures a year ago in May, 1948."

The senator said May unemployment figures can be explained in part by the fact that the nation's total labor force has increased almost 2,000,000 since the first of the month.

Speaking for one aspect of the unemployment program, Val J. Washington of the republican national committee said Saturday that more than 1,000,000 Negroes were out of work. He blamed the Democrats.

The Democrats should immediately devise means of taking care of colored citizens whom they have so heartlessly abandoned by defaulting on their civil rights promises," he said in a statement.

Court Upholds Fines of Six Unionists

Little Rock, June 20—(AP)—The Arkansas supreme court today refused to set aside fines and jail sentences of six unionists members cited for contempt of the Washington chancery court for violating an injunction against picketing.

The court said Chancellor John K. Butt had the right to forbid the men to "picket until their legal right to do so in the circumstances should be determined."

Cited by the chancellor were C. E. Carnes, business manager, and J. S. Kretzer, J. M. Thorsen, Jack Winters, Jesse Barnes and Robert Eaton, members of the International Workers of the World and Common Laborers' Building.

They were arrested for picketing construction of an Ozark rural electrification cooperative building in Fayetteville on which Carl Tunc was the contractor.

Tunc filed the original complaint charging the union caused the strike and that unlawful picketing was being carried on. The supreme court said the record shows temporary restraining order was issued "with consent of the defendants."

When picketing continued, Carnes said the five union members were cited for contempt and each fined $50 and sentenced to ten days in jail.

The defendants contended that the lower court was without jurisdiction because no injunction bond was issued. The supreme court said, however, that the defendants were not certain respecting their rights and required time to confer with counsel "x x x hence the delay was to their advantage."

It was also insisted that the court could not prohibit peaceful picketing. On that point the high court said "where a court has jurisdiction of the subject matter and the person it may exercise its apparent power, even though error is committed in doing so."

The defendants denied that the injunction was by consent. The supreme court said if that was so, it should have been shown "through a bystanders' bill of exceptions. Our statutes protect litigants against such mistakes and give preferential treatment to the bill."

The ruling concluded that "the situation is down to the simple proposition that the defendants chose to follow advice of persons who were mistaken regarding the legal effect of what they proposed to do. In taking this course they assumed a responsibility for that mistake, and their misfortune must be left to the sound dis-

Surveys Differ on Result of Unemployment

By HOWARD DBSON
Washington, June 20—(AP)—Two national surveys agree the nation may have 5,000,000 or more jobless, but they disagree on what happens next.

In reports published over the weekend, the Public Affairs institute, which describes itself as a non-profit, non-partisan research organization, predicted that 8,000,000 workers will be out of jobs a year from now unless the federal government takes steps to give business a boost.

Thus, we read this week-end that the British socialist state is finding fault with its universal free health service. The Select Committee on Estimates, which is parliament's budgetary watchdog, says compulsory medical service is costing the British far too much.

The American Federation of Labor declared, "a serious business recession is almost impossible."

Senator O'Mahoney (D-Wyo), also in a weekend statement, said the situation is confused and congress will study it.

Advertising for a Wife

Dear Miss Dix: I am thinking of advertising in a matrimonial and another chance to it by getting a mail-order wife that you take sight unseen.

When you are contracting to spend the next 30 or 40 years with a woman you want to look her over carefully before you sign on the dotted line and find out everything you possibly can about her character and disposition and tastes and habits, and industry and thrift, and what school of cooking and religion she has been brought up in, if any. For on the knowledge thus gained you must base your guess as to whether you will suit each other and be happy and companionable.

Even when a man has made mud pies with a girl in kindergarten and scrapped with her through grammar school and dated her through high, it is hard enough for him to get a real line upon her. She has little peculiarities and ways and eccentricities of temper and temperament hidden away that he never suspected were concealed about her angelic person, and marriage brings these out as a hot potato does the measles.

So if a man who has known a girl all her life can't tell just what he is getting when he picks one out for wife, what earthly chance has a man who marries a woman the first time he ever sees her and whom he recognizes by her having a white carnation pinned on her left shoulder?

It really doesn't matter much what kind of woman a man marries. The thing that is important is getting one that suits him and the only way to test congeniality is by the application thereof. A man has to sit and talk with a woman by the hour to ascertain whether she is an entertaining companion or a bore. He has to eat her cooking before he can tell whether he is willing to trust his digestion to her or not. And these things cannot be found out in a school of correspondence.

On Bargain Counter
Besides the mere fact that a woman has to advertise for a husband is indication in itself that he is on the bargain counter and has been passed over by the men in her community.

Some, of course, are women of irreproachable character, all sicc and very wide, but who didn't happen to be a pretty pattern, or have the right colored hair, or for some reason failed to hit the finicky masculine taste and who, seeing they were leftovers, have taken this way of trying to force themselves on the matrimonial market. But many others who advertise for husbands are adventuresses who prey on the gullible and optimistic gentlemen who believe their statements that they are beautiful and wealthy ladies who are taking that way of finding mates.

So, Mr. E. Z., if you want to marry, pick out a wife from among the women you have known for a long time. Right around the corner you will find a girl who is just as good-looking, just as intelligent, just as domestic as exists anywhere in the world, and she will have the added advantage of having been reared in the same environment as you and having the same tastes and habits. And you will know that you are getting, which you will not know if you marry a stranger.

DOROTHY DIX

Dear Miss Dix: I am four years older than the man I am going to marry. He does not know it. Shall I tell him?

PERPLEXED

Answer: A woman's age is a secret between herself and her mirror and is nobody else's business, not even her fiance's and she is perfectly justified in refusing to answer if he asks her the direct question.

He once heard a very charming elderly beau get out of this situation in a particularly diplomatic manner. An inquisitive woman asked him bluntly how old he was to which he responded: "If you will forgive me for not telling you, I will forgive you for asking the question".

There are so many things so much more important in marriages than age that I am constantly amazed that people put such stress upon it. There is congeniality of taste, of habits. There is personality. There is sweetness of disposition. There is mutual understanding. There is kindness and helpfulness, a thousand things that matter so much more than whether a woman is four years younger or four years older than a man.

So tell your sweetheart that it is not of his business how old you are and that so far as he is concerned you are just exactly the right age for him. And that you are going to stay that age as long as you live.

Dear Miss Dix: I am 16 years old and I don't want to work or help my mother with housework. What shall I do? I am thinking of running away and getting married.

M. G.

Answer: Well, if you don't want to work, I would certainly advise you to refrain from getting married. Believe me, that is no soft snap where a girl sits down in a silk cushion and does nothing but feed upon strawberries, sugar and cream. For most women marriage means fourteen four-o-day jobs with no holidays and layoffs.

But, my dear child, work isn't a curse. It is our greatest blessing. It is what puts interest and pep in existence and justifies our having lived. If you don't want to help your mother, get a good job into which you can put your heart and your back and you will find happiness in it.

The Reverend H. Paul Holdridge, Pastor, performed the impressive ceremony before an arch of greenery and calla lilies.

The church was beautifully decorated with standards of wood-warda fern, seven-branch candelabras with cathedral tapers, and floor baskets of gladioli and lilies.

Mrs. Florence Hyatt, organist, presented a program of wedding music consisting of "Liebestraum," "Liszt," Debussy's "Clair de Lune," "Serenade," "Ave Maria" by Schubert, and "McDowell's 'To a Wild Rose'". The traditional wedding marches were used. Mrs. Dick Watkins, soloist, attired in a floor length dress of lavender marquisette with a shoulder corsage of talisman roses, sang "At Dawning" and "I Love Thee" accompanied by Mrs. Hyatt who wore a white silk dress and a corsage of pink rose buds.

had made me judge the wench too harshly.

"Maybe I'm wrong," I said. "Maybe she's kind to dogs and husbands."

"How'd you like to find out?" Doug asked, with a peculiar smile on his face.

"I don't pick up strange women much."

"Come on," Doug said, "and bring your glass with you. It's all right. I've met her. In fact, she's uh — a client of mine."

I was half way across the room before I realized it. I'd been really fatigued, and then it was too late to back out. This was the "client" with the special job. Doug had spotted me at the bar, phoned me to come over, and held me till she got here.

There was only one thing though, that spoiled Doug's little scheme: not for any money or any person would I give up the holiday I had promised myself.

Doug introduced me. "Cory this is Mike McTaig. Mike, Miss Cory Parnell."

She said hello in a voice that made you want to hear it again.

" Didn't I tell you I'd find this fellow in one of our better bars," boomed Doug. "He's just a hard-rock miner at heart."

I was sitting at the bar in the Golden Room, thinking the thoughts that come to a man after his third rye highball, when somebody thumped me on the back. In the mirror I could see it was Doug Weyman; I restrained that first murderous impulse.

"Fine, fine," Doug said, gracefully dropping the client. "You know, it's time you got married. Miss, you're missing the best part of life."

"You and Carol have tried hard enough to get me hitched," I said. "You gods, when I think of the charms you used to parade before me. Every time I had dinner at your place I felt like the chief buyer for the Sultan of Pottawattamie. Not that they weren't nice kids — some of 'em."

"You're too darned particular," Doug grumbled.

"I'm not asking much," I objected. "Why didn't you look us up when you got out of the Army? What's Bolivia got that we haven't got?"

"Well, it seems there was a time right after I got out — three years. Why didn't you look us up when you got out of the Army? What's Bolivia got that we haven't got?"

"Well, it seems there was a time right after I got out — three years. Why didn't you look us up when you got out of the Army? What's Bolivia got that we haven't got?"

"I'm not asking much," I objected. "You know that in ninety-nine times out of a hundred their dreams will end up with a few pieces of rusting machinery and a hole in the ground. If you're going to be a skeptic, I'm going to be a skeptic."

Fair Enough

By King Features Syndicate.

New York June 16 — I say it was a fine idea to introduce in the Coplon espionage trial in Washington secret FBI reports in which confidential informants expressed belief that certain Hollywood actors and writers and others were members of the Communist party.

This action tended to confirm information which for some time has been available to reporters on the treason beat. It is taking in a lot of territory to say that this or that one is a member of the Communist party. Many persons who are thorough Communists are not actual members of the party, so as non-Communists, they are not members of the secret society tighter than the Klan. But it is a strange fact that not only our constitution but some of our courts have been used the courts too helpfully to protect from exposure and frank discussion the works and associations of pro-Communists.

Let us put it that way. Pro-Communists. It is no libel to say that a person is a Democrat or a Republican, and Felix Frankfurter, in one of his side-long slipper opinions, once held that it was just fair and take in a "labor dispute" for pickets to call a man a fascist who was not a fascist. But even to call a pro-Communist a pro-Communist might be a risky service to the public even though the party has legal existence. The tendency, therefore, has been to cover over these people. Only they have been named as Communists, but nevertheless as the debates in Congress or in the courts, the arguments or testimony may be published. It is possible that an individual will be done wrong this way. I believe this was so in the case of Helen Hayes, who was named in the list in the Coplon trial, not as a Communist but as an actress who appeared on a Russian relief program. But let it be a warning to her and others.

As to some of the others who were in the Washington list, I have no such generous doubts. As to Edward G. Robinson, Frederic March, Paul Robeson, Donald Ogden Stewart, Dorothy Parker, Ruth McKenney, Albert Maltz, Dalton Trumbo and Alva Bessie, I share in the secret informant of the FBI reported that he was satisfied that they were or might as well have been members of the party.

Anyone who is loyal to the United States has an obligation to refrain from association and collaboration with persons who are disloyal and must assume all the risk of such messings around. I subscribe to the principle of guilt by association in the cases of those who insist that they do not believe in communism but knowingly do associate and collaborate.

I believe in pointing out to the American business firms which pay millions for advertising space and to the people who buy the magazines and the advertised goods that this or that magazine has consistently employed and given voice to the prejudices of this or that individual. The New Yorker employed Dorothy Parker for years to review books. It is not a new experience to her to be tagged as a Communist and this is no news to the editors and owners of the New Yorker. The advertisers and the customers of the New Yorker should take notice. She has been named in connection with many fronts in the congressional reports of the committees.

The same goes for the New York Herald Tribune. When Hanns Eisler, Bunting — Kell, Detroit, 353; D. Maggio, Boston, 322; Runs — Joost, Philadelphia 61; Williams, Boston 52.

Manager Clyde Zinn's Hope Legion team broke even last week defeating Murfreesboro 9-4, but dropping a 2-1 decision to Atlanta. Denvil Ross continued his heavy hitting as the pitcher-outfielder moved up from 100 to 409 the past week with three hits in seven trips to the plate.

A newcomer to the ball club, Frank Hale is pounding the ball all over the lot as he has collected three hits in four trips to the plate with two wins each against one defeat. Denvil Ross is the strike out king with 47 to his credit.

This week will find the locals hitting two strong clubs. The locals travel to Murfreesboro Tuesday night and will play Curtis here Saturday night.

Education Is Feeling Red Pressure

By JAMES MARLOW

Washington, June 20—(P)—Step by step, education in this country is beginning to feel the pressure of the national concern about communism.

As the pressure grows, inside and outside the schools themselves, angry arguments become intense over this question:

How far can academic freedom—freedom to teach and search for truth—be interfered with without damaging, terrorizing or destroying it?

Here are some examples of recent events:

1. Several professors were fired from the University of Washington for being members of the Communist party.

2. The University of California has ordered its 4,000 teachers to take a new oath of loyalty to the United States.

3. A week ago 20 top educators—including General Dwight Eisenhower, president of Columbia university, and Dr. James B. Conant, president of Harvard, issued a report which said:

Members of the Communist party should not be employed as teachers.

The reasoning behind these three steps was this: A Communist party member has no academic freedom anyway; he surrendered intellectual honesty when he joined the party and now, sheep-like, does what it tells him.

But all three steps dealt with the teaching done by teachers, not with what teachers did outside a classroom. Now that element has been added.

In a sharp letter to President Conant of Harvard—who says Communist teachers shouldn't be hired—Frank B. Ober, who graduated from Harvard in 1913 and is now a Baltimore lawyer, said:

"Anybody familiar with Communist methods knows that most of the damage from teachers is done outside of the classroom, made possible by the influence gained in the classroom.

"Similarly, I believe a professor's efforts to aid Communists gain greatly from his prestige as a professor, and it is not reasonable to close one's eyes to such extracurricular activities."

Ober is the father of the anti-Communist law recently passed by the Maryland legislature. In his letter he complained bitterly about two Harvard professors, Harlow Shapley, who teaches astronomy, and John Ciardi, who teaches English composition.

Ciardi, he said, spoke at a Maryland meeting of Henry Wallace's Progressive party, to fight the anti-Communist law sponsored by the committee.

In it he asked for a list of text books used by the schools.

His committee wanted to know which books were slanted in favor of Russia. Immediately, some of the most important of the educators denounced this interference in education by the committee.

The committee has been given an editorial searching. President Truman cracked at it, and now five of the nine committee members said they weren't even consulted about the letter Woods sent out.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

Take a Good Look

I watched the television at Andy's Garden Tavern last Saturday. "Andy," I asks him, "wouldn't the picture be clearer if it were darker in here? How about if instead of that waist-high curtain you have in the window you had a shade for the whole window?"

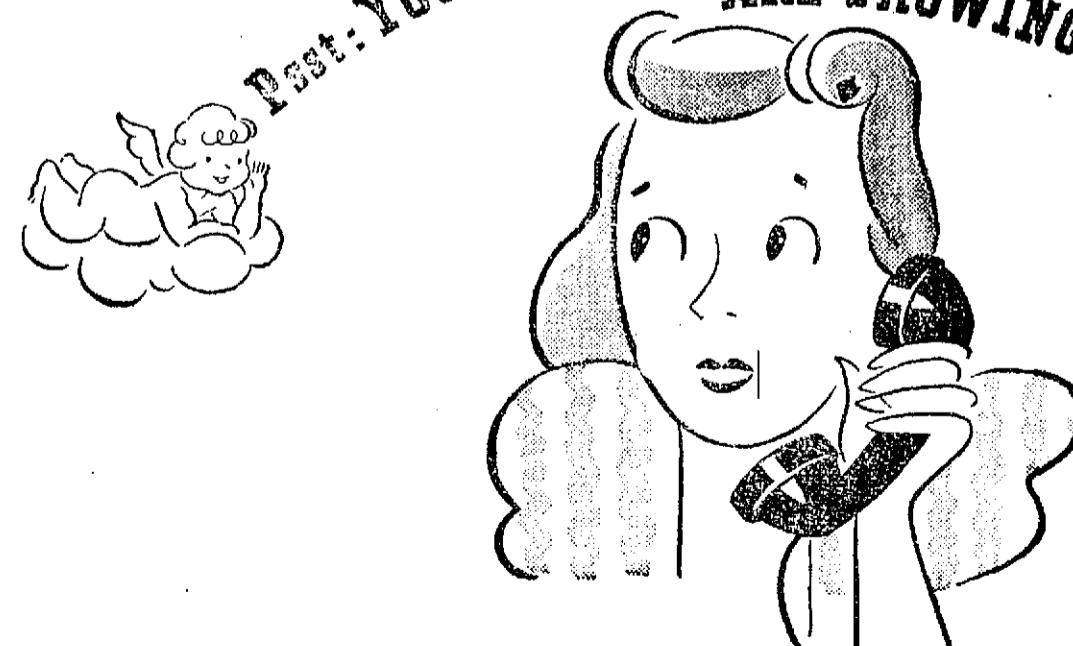

"The television might be brighter," he says, "but then people outside couldn't see in. And that's more important than the television picture to me—because I want people to see I'm not hiding anything. I want 'em to see it's a well-run place."

(P.S. Andy changed the position of the television set and now the picture's fine.)

PEST: YOUR TELEPHONE MANNERS ARE SHOWING!

If you take the lead in sharing your party line, others are sure to follow. When you're thoughtful of them, they'll usually be thoughtful of you.

How you answer these questions is an easy way to check up on your telephone manners:

Do I give up the line promptly in an emergency?

Do I listen to make sure the line is not in use before placing a call?

Do I wait a few minutes between calls?

Do I make most of my calls at off-peak periods?

If your answers are "yes," you're setting a good example for the others on your party line and they're almost certain to show you the same consideration. Southwestern Bell Telephone Company brushed the bar off. But with the help of Bill Carroll of Oklahoma and Tom Bennett of Wisconsin who also cleared 14 feet, he helped turn the big upset of the afternoon, grounding USC's Jack Montgomery and Oregon's George Rasmussen, team co-favorites, along with a score of the nation's top vaulters. Montgomery and Rasmussen went out at 13-8.

Otherwise, the championships ran much according to form.

Southern California romped away with its 13th team title, scoring 25-23 points to put distance two other California schools, UCLA with 31 and Stanford with 30.

Mal Patton won his fifth NCAA sprint title coasting the 100 in 9.7 but bearing down for 20.4 in the 220.

UCLA's Craig Dixon was the other double winner, capturing the 120-yard highs in 13.0 seconds and the 220-lows in 22.7, the former equalled the NCAA standard set by Ed Dugger of Tufts in 1940.

Fuchs' 56 feet, 1 1/2 inch shot put was the only new NCAA mark, bettered by an inch the record of the late Al Blodz of Georgetown, set in 1940.

Don Gehrmann of Wisconsin ran the fastest outdoor mile of the year, 4 minutes, 9.8 seconds, to take his second straight NCAA

Escape Enemis

Flying fish, according to the Encyclopedia Britannica, probably move through the air to escape capture by other fish, sometimes sailing over the water as far as 200 yards.

Tied for 11th place were Tulane, San Diego, Missouri, Cornell and Brown with 10 points.

Oklahoma, Indiana, Kansas and Rice tied for 21st and 7 and Kansas and Villanova tied for 28th with 4.
